

All set for adventure

AN adventure playground at Quintilian School in Mt Claremont was taken to a new level this term with a new fort, racing slides, commando-style netting and a firey's pole.

The new playground that links two existing areas was a year in the making and built during the school holidays, surprising students when they returned to school this term.

A super turbo slide will also be fitted in the next few weeks.

▶▶ SEETHEVIDEO AT
www.communitynews.com.au

Quintilian School Year 1 students Zander Bennett and Peppa Wingham in the school's new adventure playground.

Picture: Andrew Ritchie

www.communitypix.com.au d483164

Rezone rebellion

By JESSICA WARRINER

PETITIONS have hit the streets of Subiaco against the draft local planning scheme, with Shenton Park local Katie Porter one of more than 30 people gattjering signatures.

Ms Porter said she was devastated to hear of the proposed changes to her suburb and has been volunteering for the Save Subi campaign.

"It's heartbreaking; it's not just small additions but multi-storey apartment blocks. I can't comprehend how anyone could think it's a good idea," she said.

The mother of three said residents were worried about amenities in the neighbourhood, parking and traffic, and raised concerns about already large student populations at local schools.

"If it goes through, people will look back and think it's a big mistake," she said.

"A lot of people are furious and passionate about this rezoning."

Save Subi founder Genevieve Binnie said

the campaign was crucial to protect the identity, architectural foundation and history of the area and more people were contacting her to get on board.

"There is no need or justification for the rezoning in these areas as proposed in the plan. These historical neighbourhoods are of much higher value to the community and to Perth as they are," she said.

She said the petition had close to 600 signatures so far.

More, page 3

FREE 11magazine!

Inspiration to jazz up your home

Top 10 cult beauty products

Luxury Lifestyle inside today